

Christ Braider is Arts & Sciences Professor Emeritus in French & Comparative Literature here in Boulder. His two most recent books, both published by the University of Toronto Press, are The Matter of Mind: Reason and Experience in the Age of Descartes (2012), which won the MLA's Jeanne and Aldo Scaglione Prize for French and Francophone studies in 2013, and Experimental Selves: Person and Experience in Early Modern Europe (2018). As both books illustrate, his work sits at the intersection of early modern European literature, theatre, philosophy, science, and art. His current research focuses on aesthetics and the philosophical grounds of humanistic scholarship.
