

Teo Ruiz is Distinguished Research Professor (Emeritus) at UCLA and a scholar of the social and popular cultures of late medieval and early modern Spain and the Western Mediterranean. Among his most recent books are: The Terror of History (2011); A King Travels: Festive Traditions in Late Medieval and Early Modern Spain (2012); Spanish Society, 1348-1700 (2nd revised ed.: 2017), and The Western Mediterranean and the World: ca. 500 to the Present (2018). Among his many honors and distinctions, he received a National Humanities Medal for 2011 in 2012 from President Obama for his “inspired teaching and writing,” and a doctor honoris causa from the Universidad de Cantabria (Spain) in 2017. He is the recipient of fellowships from the NEH, the Mellon Foundation, and the Institute for Advanced Study (Princeton), the ACLS, and the Guggenheim Foundation.